His message on abundance

In many of your lives a fear of scarcity, of a lack of money and material abundance, if you were to actually choose what you really want in this life. You doubt whether there truly is a place for you in this world. And this doubt translates into a fear of lacking financial resources. But the core of this anxiety is not about money, but revolves around the question of whether you may really be who you are. Can you believe that you have the freedom and means to do what really inspires you? Do you trust your soul's whispers? What holds you back is not the world outside you but your own reservations about truly embracing yourself and receiving whatever you need to flourish and find joy.

Look inside yourself. Imagine you are sitting in a beautiful spot in nature. Spring has begun, the greenery is budding, and the sun shines on your skin. You sit in a clearing in the woods and suddenly there appears a wizard who comes toward you. He comes to you, and out of his sleeve he conjures up gold coins that he smilingly tosses to you. "How many do you want, just say it," he asks. Look at your response. What is your first reaction to that offer? Can you receive it? Can you tell him exactly what you need? Or do you feel something blocking it in your heart? Do you ask, "Am I allowed to have this? Can I ask for this much?" Do you need to think about it and do you have doubts? Simply register your first reaction. Then take one of the gold coins and hold it in your hand. Feel its energy. See or feel what is inside that money. In that gold coin is a promise of abundance on Earth, whether it is a nice home in which to live, a pleasant workplace, or enough money for living expenses. It is really about the freedom to explore and discover and create, the feeling of being secure and safe – everything you associate with earthly abundance. Experience the warm golden energy in that coin and see if you can feel it flow through your arms toward your heart – see if you can receive it. Ask the wizard: "How can I better learn to receive?" Or keep it simple and playful and ask him: "Can you teach me this trick?" Let the wizard show you with a word or a gesture how the key to earthly abundance lies within you. The key to abundance lies within you all. In this phase of your life, the time has come for a stronger manifestation of your higher self, your soul. You secured this intention for yourself when you started this life long ago, and even before that. You have carried this intention with you for a long cycle of lives. Trust then that there is a path ready for you with whatever supports and helps you to maintain it. By constantly listening to what you truly desire, and what nurtures you inside, you keep on course and the path finds you. You do not have to strive for it or fight for it, the path will find you.
